Theories of Personality
Understanding Persons
Seventh Edition

Susan Cloninger
The Sage Colleges
Brief Contents

1 Introduction to Personality Theory 1
2 Freud’s Classical Psychoanalysis 17
3 Jung’s Analytical Psychology 40
4 Adler’s Individual Psychology 60
5 Erikson’s Psychosocial Development 77
6 Horney, Relational Theory, and the Interpersonal Psychoanalytic Approach 99
7 Allport’s Personological Trait Theory 120
8 Two Factor Analytic Trait Theories 137
9 Biological Theories 156
10 Behavioral Theories 177
11 Kelly’s Personal Construct Theory 201
12 Mischel’s Traits in Cognitive Social Learning Theory 216
13 Bandura’s Theory on Performance in Cognitive Social Learning 232
14 Rogers’s Person-Centered Theory 249
15 Maslow’s Need Hierarchy Theory and Positive Psychology 265
16 Buddhist Psychology 285
17 Concluding Remarks 305
Contents

Preface ix

1 Introduction to Personality Theory

1.1 Personality
   1.1.1 Definition of Personality 2

1.2 Description of Personality
   1.2.1 Differences Between People 3

1.3 Personality Dynamics
   1.3.1 Adaptation and Adjustment 4
   1.3.2 Cognitive Processes 4
   1.3.3 Culture 4

1.4 Personality Development 5

1.5 The Scientific Approach
   1.5.1 Theory 7
   1.5.2 Criteria of a Good Theory 7
   1.5.3 Eclecticism and the Future of Personality Theory 9
   1.5.4 Relationship Between Theory and Research 9

1.6 Methods in Personality Research
   1.6.1 Personality Measurement 10
   1.6.2 Correlational Studies 13
   1.6.3 Experimentation 14
   1.6.4 Studying Individuals: Case Studies and Psychobiography 15

Summary: Introduction to Personality Theory 15

2 Freud’s Classical Psychoanalysis

2.1 Overview of Freud’s Theory
   2.1.1 Biography of Sigmund Freud 20
   2.1.2 Freud’s Theory in His Time, and Ours 21
   2.1.3 Evaluating Freud’s Theory 21

2.2 The Unconscious
   2.2.1 Psychic Determinism 21
   2.2.2 Levels of Consciousness 22
   2.2.3 Effects of Unconscious Motivation 22
   2.2.4 Origin and Nature of the Unconscious 25

2.3 Structures of the Personality
   2.3.1 The Id 26
   2.3.2 The Ego 27
   2.3.3 The Superego 27

2.4 Intrapsychic Conflict
   2.4.1 Energy Hypothesis 28
   2.4.2 Anxiety 28
   2.4.3 Defense Mechanisms 29
   2.4.4 Sublimation and Creativity 30

2.4.5 Empirical Studies of Defenses 30

2.5 Psychoanalysis
   2.5.1 The Process of Psychoanalytic Therapy 34
   2.5.2 The Recovered Memory Controversy 35
   2.5.3 Psychoanalysis as a Scientific Theory 36
   2.5.4 Silverman’s Experiments 36
   2.5.5 Nonconscious Cognition 36
   2.5.6 Nonconscious Influences and the Brain 38

Summary: Freud’s Classical Psychoanalysis 38

3 Jung’s Analytical Psychology

3.1 Overview of Jung’s Theory
   3.1.1 Biography of Carl Jung 43
   3.1.2 Evaluating Jung’s Theory 44

3.2 The Structure of Personality
   3.2.1 The Psyche and the Self: The Personality as a Whole 45
   3.2.2 Ego 46
   3.2.3 Persona 46
   3.2.4 Shadow 46
   3.2.5 Anima and Animus 46

3.3 Collective Unconscious
   3.3.1 The Shadow and the Anima or Animus as Archetypes 48
   3.3.2 Other Archetypes 48
   3.3.3 Psychosis: Dangers of the Collective Unconscious 49
   3.3.4 Symbolism and the Collective Unconscious 49

3.4 Therapy
   3.4.1 Dreams 52
   3.4.2 Other Symbolic Therapy Techniques 52

3.5 Synchronicity 53

3.6 Psychological Types
   3.6.1 Introversion and Extraversion 54
   3.6.2 The Four Functions 55
   3.6.3 Measurement and Application 56

Summary: Jung’s Analytical Psychology 58

4 Adler’s Individual Psychology

4.1 Overview of Adler’s Theory
   4.1.1 Biography of Alfred Adler 63
   4.1.2 Interventions Based on Adler’s Theory 65
4.2 Striving From Inferiority Toward Superiority
   4.2.1 Inferiority
   4.2.2 Adler’s Evolving Ideas About Striving to Improve
   4.2.3 Fictional Finalism
4.3 The Unity of Personality
   4.3.1 Style of Life
   4.3.2 Mistaken and Healthy Styles of Life
4.4 The Development of Personality
   4.4.1 Parental Behavior
   4.4.2 Family Constellation
4.5 Psychological Health
   4.5.1 The Three Tasks of Life

Summary: Adler’s Individual Psychology

5 Erikson’s Psychosocial Development
    5.1 Overview of Erikson’s Theory
       5.1.1 Biography of Erik Erikson
       5.1.2 The Epigenetic Principle
    5.2 The Psychosocial Stages
       5.2.1 Lifespan Ego Development in a Social Context
       5.2.2 The Psychosocial Stages Described
    5.3 The Role of Culture in Relation to the Psychosocial Stages
    5.4 Sexual, Racial, and Ethnic Identity
       5.4.1 Gender Identity and Sexual Orientation
       5.4.2 Racial/Ethnic Identity
    5.5 Research on Psychosocial Development
       5.5.1 Identity Status
       5.5.2 Research on Other Psychosocial Stages
       5.5.3 Correlates of Stage Measures
       5.5.4 Applications to Psychoanalysis and Psychoanalytic Social Psychology

Summary: Erikson’s Psychosocial Development

6 Horney, Relational Theory, and the Interpersonal Psychoanalytic Approach
    6.1 Overview of Interpersonal Psychoanalytic Theory
       6.1.1 The Life of Karen Horney
       6.1.2 Interpersonal Psychoanalysis: Horney
       6.1.3 Horney’s Approach to Therapy
    6.2 Three Interpersonal Orientations
       6.2.1 Moving Toward People: The Self-Effacing Solution
       6.2.2 Moving Against People: The Expansive Solution
       6.2.3 Moving Away from People: The Resignation Solution

Summary: Horney, Relational Theory, and the Interpersonal Psychoanalytic Approach
8 Two Factor Analytic Trait Theories

8.1 Overview of Factor Analytic Trait Theories
- 8.1.1 Factor Analysis
- 8.1.2 The 16 Factor Theory: Cattell
- 8.1.3 Biography of Raymond Cattell
- 8.1.4 The Role of Theory in Cattell’s Empirical Approach

8.2 Personality Measurement and the Prediction of Behavior
- 8.2.1 Because Personality Is Complex: A Multivariate Approach
- 8.2.2 Psychological Adjustment
- 8.2.3 Three Types of Traits
- 8.2.4 Predicting Behavior
- 8.2.5 Determinants of Personality: Heredity and Environment

8.3 The Five-Factor Model (FFM)
- 8.3.1 The Big Five Personality Traits
- 8.3.2 A Hierarchical Model

8.4 Are the Five Factors Universal?
- 8.4.1 Various Measures of the Big Five
- 8.4.2 Factors and Other Personality Constructs

Summary: Two Factor Analytic Trait Theories

9 Biological Theories

9.1 Overview of Biological Theories
- 9.1.1 Biological Approach
- 9.1.2 Biological Mechanisms in Context

9.2 Evolutionary Approaches
- 9.2.1 Evolutionary Paradigm for Personality Theory
- 9.2.2 Aggression and Dominance
- 9.2.3 Sexual Behavior
- 9.2.4 Parental Behavior
- 9.2.5 Altruism and Social Emotions
- 9.2.6 Culture

9.3 Biological Influences on Personality
- 9.3.1 Genetics
- 9.3.2 Temperament
- 9.3.3 Emotional Arousal
- 9.3.4 Cortical Arousal

9.4 Biological Factor Theories: Eysenck, Gray, and Others
- 9.4.1 Eysenck’s “PEN” Biological Model
- 9.4.2 Gray’s Reinforcement Sensitivity Theory
- 9.4.3 Cloninger’s Tridimensional Model

Summary: Biological Theories

10 Behavioral Theories

10.1 Overview of Behavioral Theories
- 10.1.1 Major Behavioral Theories
- 10.1.2 The Act Frequency Approach to Personality Measurement
- 10.1.3 Contributions of Behaviorism to Personality Theory

10.2 Behavior Theorists
- 10.2.1 Biography of B. F. Skinner
- 10.2.2 Biography of John Dollard
- 10.2.3 Biography of Neal Miller
- 10.2.4 Biography of Arthur Staats

10.3 Radical Behaviorism: Skinner
- 10.3.1 Behavior as the Data for Scientific Study
- 10.3.2 Learning Principles
- 10.3.3 Applications of Behavioral Techniques
- 10.3.4 Radical Behaviorism and Personality: Some Concerns

10.4 Psychoanalytic Learning Theory: Dollard and Miller
- 10.4.1 Learning Theory Reconceptualization of Psychoanalytic Concepts
- 10.4.2 Four Fundamental Concepts about Learning

10.5 The Learning Process
- 10.5.1 Learning by Imitation
- 10.5.2 The Four Critical Training Periods of Childhood
- 10.5.3 Frustration and Aggression
- 10.5.4 Conflict
- 10.5.5 Language, Neurosis, and Psychotherapy
- 10.5.6 Suppression

10.6 Psychological Behaviorism: Staats
- 10.6.1 Reinforcement
- 10.6.2 Situations
- 10.6.3 Basic Behavioral Repertoires
- 10.6.4 The Emotional-Motivational Repertoire
- 10.6.5 The Language-Cognitive Repertoire
- 10.6.6 The Sensory-Motor Repertoire
- 10.6.7 Psychological Adjustment
- 10.6.8 The Nature-Nurture Question from the Perspective of Psychological Behaviorism

Summary: Behavioral Theories

11 Kelly’s Personal Construct Theory

11.1 Overview of Kelly’s Theory
- 11.1.1 Biography of George Kelly
- 11.1.2 Constructive Alternativism
- 11.1.3 The Process of Construing

Summary: Kelly’s Personal Construct Theory
11.14 The Structure of Construct Systems 206
11.15 The Social Embeddedness of Construing Efforts 206

11.2 Cognitive Complexity 209
11.2.1 The Role Construct Repertory (REP) Test 209
11.2.2 Personality Change 211
11.2.3 Therapy 212

11.3 Research Applications 213
11.3.1 Therapy Applications 213
11.3.2 Business Applications 214
11.3.3 Other Applications 214

Summary: Kelly's Personal Construct Theory 214

12 Mischel's Traits in Cognitive Social Learning Theory 216

12.1 Overview of Mischel's Theory 219
12.1.1 Implications of Mischel's Theory 219
12.1.2 Biography of Walter Mischel 219

12.2 Delay of Gratification 220

12.3 Personality Traits: Mischel's Challenge 222
12.3.1 The Consistency Paradox 222
12.3.2 The Situational Context of Behavior 223
12.3.3 The Wediko Camp Study 223
12.3.4 Learned Patterns of Situation–Behavior Relationships 223
12.3.5 The Consistency Question as a Continuing Theoretical Challenge 225

12.4 The CAPS Model 226
12.4.1 Encoding Strategies and Personal Constructs 226
12.4.2 Expectancies 227
12.4.3 Affects 227
12.4.4 Goals and Values 228
12.4.5 Competencies and Self-Regulatory Plans 228
12.4.6 Applications of the CAPS Model of Personality 228

Summary: Mischel's Traits in Cognitive Social Learning Theory 231

13 Bandura's Theory on Performance in Cognitive Social Learning 232

13.1 Overview of Bandura's Theory 235
13.1.1 Biography of Albert Bandura 236
13.1.2 Reciprocal Determinism 236
13.1.3 Self-Regulation of Behavior 237
13.1.4 Self-Efficacy 237
13.1.5 The Person in the Social Environment 241

13.2 Processes Influencing Learning 242
13.2.1 Observational Learning and Modeling 243

13.3 Therapy 245
13.3.1 Social Learning Therapy 246
13.3.2 Self-Efficacy and Therapy 246

Summary: Bandura's Theory on Performance in Cognitive Social Learning 248

14 Rogers's Person-Centered Theory 249

14.1 Overview of Rogers's Theory 251
14.1.1 Biography of Carl Rogers 253
14.1.2 Criticisms of Rogers's Theory 254

14.2 The Actualizing Tendency 255
14.2.1 The Organismic Valuing Process 255
14.2.2 The Fully Functioning Person 255
14.2.3 Subjective Experience and Science 256

14.3 The Self 256
14.3.1 Development 257
14.3.2 Development of Creativity 257

14.4 Therapy 257
14.4.1 Client-Centered Therapy 258
14.4.2 Research on Therapy 259
14.4.3 Encounter Groups 261

14.5 Other Applications 261
14.5.1 Humanistic Education 261
14.5.2 Marriage and Relationships 262
14.5.3 Business 262
14.5.4 Political Conflict, War, and Peace 262

Summary: Rogers's Person-Centered Theory 263

15 Maslow's Need Hierarchy Theory and Positive Psychology 265

15.1 Overview of Maslow's Theory and Positive Psychology 266
15.1.1 Biography of Abraham Maslow 266
15.1.2 Need Hierarchy Theory: Maslow 266
15.1.3 Maslow's Vision of Psychology 266
15.1.4 Maslow's Challenge to Traditional Science 270
15.1.5 The Promise of Positive Psychology 270

15.2 Hierarchy of Needs 270
15.2.1 Deficiency Motivation 271
15.2.2 Being Motivation 271
15.2.3 Differences Between D-Motivation and B-Motivation 272
15.2.4 Self-Actualization 273

15.3 Applications and Implications of Maslow's Theory 276
15.3.1 Therapy 276
15.3.2 Workplace 276
15.3.3 Religion and Spirituality 277
15.3.4 Education 277
Contents

15.4 Positive Psychology
   15.4.1 Positive Subjective Experience 277
   15.4.2 Positive Traits 278
   15.4.3 Positive Institutions 280

Summary: Maslow's Need Hierarchy Theory and Positive Psychology 282

16 Buddhist Psychology
   16.1 Overview of Buddhist Theory 285
      16.1.1 A Brief History of Buddhism 288
      16.1.2 Biography of Siddhartha Gautama 289
      16.1.3 The Relevance of Buddhism for Personality Psychology 290
      16.1.4 The Dialogue Between Buddhism and Scientific Psychology 290
   16.2 The Buddhist Worldview: The Four Noble Truths 290
      16.2.1 The First Noble Truth: There Is Suffering 291
      16.2.2 The Second Noble Truth: The Origin of Suffering 291
      16.2.3 The Third Noble Truth: The End of Suffering 291
      16.2.4 The Fourth Noble Truth: The Eightfold Path 291
   16.3 Buddhism and Personality Concepts 292
      16.3.1 Self or Ego 292
      16.3.2 Transience and Mortality 293
      16.3.3 Behavior: Its Causes and Consequences 293
      16.3.4 Mind and Body 294
      16.3.5 Emotions 295
      16.3.6 Interpersonal Relationships and Society 296
   16.4 Spiritual Practices 296
      16.4.1 Meditation 297
      16.4.2 The 17 Moments of Perception 299
      16.4.3 Buddhism and Psychotherapy 302

Summary: Buddhism Psychology 303

17 Concluding Remarks 305
   17.1 Choosing or Combining Theories 306
      17.1.1 Eclecism 306
      17.1.2 Pluralism 306
      17.1.3 Unified Theory 306
   17.2 Theories as Metaphors 307
      17.2.1 The Mechanistic Metaphor 307
      17.2.2 The Organic Metaphor 307
      17.2.3 The Information-Processing Metaphor 307
      17.2.4 The Narrative Metaphor 307
      17.2.5 The Metaphor of the Emergent Self 308
      17.2.6 The Metaphor of the Transcendent Self 308
      17.2.7 The Metaphor of Chaos and Complexity 308

Summary: Concluding Remarks 310

Glossary 311
References 321
Credits 399
Name Index 406
Subject Index 430
Preface

I’ve been writing and revising this text with its various editions for over a quarter of a century and have come to realize that it will always be a work in progress. What used to feel like “completion” now feels simply like a “milestone” as each new edition is sent to production. That is fitting, as the field of personality psychology, too, continues to develop. Over the years, some of the hot topics (like the debate over traits versus situationalism, and the controversy over repressed memory of abuse) have faded into the historical past as theories have matured and research has guided reconceptualizations, and some topics have been dropped altogether, in order to make room for the new.

While not reflected in the words I have crafted for this edition, I sometimes reminisce about the first term paper I wrote in my first personality course, where I explored all that I could find written by Gordon Allport. If there is a unitary vision, however vague and incomplete, for the field, it seems—at least so far in the development of personality theory—to be his personology. But details are lacking in his statements, and for that, we need many other theories, ranging from the exciting findings of neuroscience to the very practical and socially important recognition of cultural contexts (e.g., challenges to the Protestant bias of Allport-inspired work on religious orientations). I do hope that personality researchers and theorists will continue their efforts to reach outside of their theoretical silos, to show how important ideas transcend theoretical boundaries. A unified theory of personality seems a distant goal, however, and one that will need to include other disciplines as well.

Researchers and theorists in personality have more contributions that deserve reporting than I can possibly include in this text: so many research findings and theoretical ideas, it would take a whole series! I invite students to do as I have done, and make understanding personality a life’s work, whether through academic study or by thoughtful observations of self and others. Understanding persons brings practical as well as academic benefits to our lives.

New to This Edition

• New Illustrative Biographies: Malala Yousafzai (Chapter 4), Serena Williams (Chapter 9), and George Harrison (Chapter 15).
• Updated research literature throughout. This includes neuroscience research, not only in the biological chapter but also integrated with various other theories (including Freud, Jung, and meditation in Buddhism).
• Updated discussion of current thinking and research about various theoretical concepts, including archetypes in Jung’s theory (Chapter 3); the replacement child and bullying in Adler’s theory (Chapter 4); epigenetics, gender identity, and sexual orientation in Erikson’s theory (Chapter 5); Alice Miller’s work on childhood victimization (Chapter 6); the effects of both nature and nurture in the Five-Factor Model (Chapter 8); increased attention to culture and the environment in evolutionary approaches (Chapter 9); and additional research using cultural and historical material in Kelly’s theory (Chapter 11).
• Updated details about various theorists’ lives, including controversy over racism in Cattell’s theory (Chapter 8) and Jung’s theory (Chapter 3); the contributions of his daughter Natalie and his relationship with Gloria in the film by Carl Rogers (Chapter 14); and the abusive behavior of Maslow’s mother (Chapter 15).
• Updated details about some illustrative biographies that are continued from the previous edition, including Mother Teresa (Chapter 7), Sonia Sotomayor (Chapter 8), Barack Obama (Chapter 13), and the Dalai Lama (Chapter 16).
• Encouragement of students’ critical thinking about many issues, such as conflict (Chapter 2), synchronicity (Chapter 3), cultural change (Chapter 6), religion and values (Chapter 7), free will (Chapter 10), and self-beliefs (Chapter 12).

Revel™

Educational technology designed for the way today’s students read, think, and learn

When students are engaged deeply, they learn more effectively and perform better in their courses. This simple fact inspired the creation of Revel: an immersive learning experience designed for the way today’s students read, think, and learn. Built in collaboration with educators and students nationwide, Revel is the newest, fully digital way to deliver respected Pearson content.

Revel enlivens course content with media interactives and assessments—integrated directly within the authors’ narrative—that provide opportunities for students to read about and practice course material in tandem. This immersive educational technology boosts student engagement, which leads to better understanding of concepts and improved performance throughout the course.

Learn more about Revel - https://www.pearson.com/revel
Available Instructor Resources

The following resources are available for instructors. These can be downloaded at https://www.pearsonhighered.com. Login required.

- PowerPoint—provides a core template of the content covered throughout the text. These can easily be added to customize for your classroom.

- Instructor's Manual—includes key terms, lecture ideas, teaching tips, suggested readings, chapter outlines, and student assignments.

- Test Bank—includes multiple-choice, true/false, and essay questions. They are tied to the numbered learning objectives from the text and tagged as per the level of difficulty and skill type.

- MyTest—an electronic format of the Test Bank to customize in-class tests or quizzes.

About The Author

Susan C. Cloninger, PhD, is a professor emerita from The Sage Colleges, Troy and Albany, New York, where she taught psychology for 36 years. Her graduate study was at the University of Michigan in Ann Arbor, where she earned a PhD in psychology with specialization in personality (in particular, social motivation). In addition to Theories of Personality: Understanding Persons, she has contributed to the Cambridge Handbook of Personality Psychology. In retirement, Sue is active as a volunteer in a supportive housing unit for persons with a history of homelessness and mental illness; in her Unitarian Universalist church; and as an amateur gardener and proud grandmother. Her professional curiosity is a quest for understanding that bridges issues from biological to social-political understanding.

Acknowledgments

With each revision, it becomes increasingly apparent that books require a team effort, even when only one author is listed. This seventh edition is no exception. Indeed, over the decades that I have been learning to become an author, I’ve come to rely on others as helpers, rather than fearing their judgments.

First, thanks to Pearson. They envisioned the first Revel edition and guided me through the translation of my ideas into a new format, with enhanced pedagogy built into the text. I’ve done a lot of online teaching, both at The Sage Colleges and Empire State College, but never with the integration of activities with content that this exciting format permits. I know that the management skills of sponsoring editor Bimbabati Sen and development editor Elisa Rogers have made my work much easier.

In particular, I am much indebted to Elisa Rogers, my development editor, who has worked closely with me throughout the revision process, interpreting the overall Revel vision and formatting to me in ways that this novice could understand, and gently suggesting better ways to implement my ideas. Her professional expertise and her personable presence has made me look forward to her emails. Certainly the book is much improved by Elisa’s gentle hand, and the process was much more enjoyable.

I’ve occasionally bounced ideas off friends and colleagues that helped shape the decisions for the new edition, including my choice of biographies to illustrate the various theories. Particular thanks to Syb, Christy, Tony, and people I’ve come to know at the Hill Street Inn. This edition includes some of those suggestions, and I welcome advice for future editions (email: clonis@sage.edu). I’m reluctant, though, to analyze living people, especially those who, because of youth or changing circumstances, are still developing or revealing their personalities—though I’ve made an exception in the case of Malala Yousafzai.

My family, John and Krissy in particular, have encouraged me and helped keep writing in perspective, and my grandson Ollie has me rethinking theories from a developmental perspective. They remind me that personality is an active and changing process in the real, interpersonal world.

Those who have created the academic content from which I draw must obviously be acknowledged: theorists and researchers who continue to ask important questions about personality and to seek answers. I love the intellectual stimulation of days immersed in their ideas and feel privileged to be their student.

In this interconnected world of resources, I am grateful to the expanding network of booksellers. It is a joy to see the care with which these tomes have been maintained and delivered, carefully wrapped with the love and respect that classics deserve.

In today’s electronic information age, I rarely visit the physical library (mostly going to pick up interlibrary loan books), but I owe thanks to the librarians of The Sage Colleges for their efficient responses to my requests, even once going beyond reasonable expectation by crawling through dusty storage areas to retrieve a microfiche version of a very old source that hadn’t been converted to modern form.

Ultimately, writing can’t be delegated or automated. Shortcomings and errors remain my responsibility, of course.

Finally, I am grateful to faculty who responded to the publisher’s request to serve as reviewers of the previous edition in order to help plan this revision.